IT stirs one's pulses to read that the United States steamer Kearsarge, after a stormy passage, has reached port; because the mere mention of the ship's name awakens glorious memories. There were many splendid achtevements in the great war, but there was not one which exceeded in interest the Kearsarge and Alabama fight. It was done in the old deliberate, grand, stately way, while thousands were watching who wanted to see the stars and stripes go down in defeat. But they did not. The Deinges Muddle. LONDON, July 1.—In the Hou Lords to-day Lord Salisbury stated that, in order to provide against action by Portugal inimical to Bri interests, England had ordered three ships to proceed to Delagoa Bay. This force would be sufficient to cope with any difficulty that might occur. He considered Portugal's action in canceling the railway concession as high-handed and unjust, and the Government had informed Portugal that they would hold her responsible for all British losses.

WHEELING, W. Va., July 1.-The ersistency with which the Mormon missionaries are carrying on their work in some parts of West Virginia is beginning to excite a great deal of indignation, and there is likely to be trouble soon. Ritchie county is at present the scene of their most active present the scene of their most active operations. Two elders, Kelly and Scriner, have taken up permanent quarters there. On Indian Creek there is quite a large congregation, and the meetings held weekly, at which polygamy was not only preached but attempts are being made to carry the theory into practice, at least one convert having taken unto himself a second wife. In other parts of the same county a like success attended the efcounty a like success attended the ef-forts of the missionaries, and in all there are fifty full fledged Mormons in the county. No efforts are being made to transplant the converts.

EVEN UP. Reno's Baseball Club Takes a

Yesterday the Truckee Baseball Club paid Reno a visit to play a friendly game with the home team. They also brought a carload of admirers with them, who returned to Truckee in about as despondent a Reno some weeks since, as the visiting club was defeated by a score of 17 to 10. The game was a poor one, as the error column will show-14 errors being credited to the Renos and 23 to the Truckees. Had the Truckee boys pat up the game they did at Truckee some weeks ago, they would have come out winners; or, had Land given Johnson the support he is capable of doing, the result might have been different Both Johnson and Crotty are good pitchers and good all-round players, but neither received the support he should have had. Ferguson has seven passed balls to his credit, while Land has five, the majority of which were costly. In the first two innings Crotty was wild in his delivery, but after that he settled down to business.

The game opened with Johnson at the bat for the Truckees, who struck out. Elsie got to first on balls and ond on Cross' safe hit. Fran-tade safe hit; Land made two-base nit and Elsie scored. Cross and Franzeni also afterwards scored.

The Renos, in their turn, scored two runs—Ferguson and Morton safely running the bases, which were duprincipally to the errors of the

In the second inning Truckee failed to score, while in the next inning Moron, Crotty, Wilson and Card added ne tally each to the Reno score.

In the third inning Johnson made safe hit, stole second, went to third on passed ball and tallied on passed ball.

When the Renos went to bat they evidently intended to win the game in one inning, as they rapped the sphere around the field in all directions, and fielders failed to properly the ball. In this the dle

NOTES. Tally another for Reno In the fifth inning Wilson was taken sick and Donnelly was substituted. Crotty, Reno's pitcher, pitches and fields his position well. As a coacher he is a "rattler."

Reno's ball club has commenced to down contending teams, and the club should make it a point to retain a good player when they can. It is said Truckeeites left considerable coin in Reno yesterday, which they fully intended should have re-turned to them doubled. In the sixth inning while at bat Morton was struck in the head by a pitched ball, which knocked him down.

Gazette" Reporter Visits That City and Notes What He Saw.

A GAZETTE reporter visited Carson Saturday and found the town in a flourishing condition. Carson at this season of the year looks charming in her summer suit. The reporter in his wanderings picked up the following items of interest:

Capitol Square, under gardner Daugherty's skillful hand, is much improved and presents a beautiful ap paring to permanently decorate that edifice. He has several red, white and blue shields, large and small, that he intends putting up between this and the Fourth of July, besides many other things that will add to the appearance of that building.

Attorney General Alexander is Attorney - General Alexander is spending his money nowadays, for a good purpose. He has recently bought 175 new books and sent in his order for 130 new volumes. This, added to what he already had, will make him a fine library. John says he wants the tools to work with after his term of office expires, and intends to have as good as anybody.

In company with Director McCuledge of the town on the site formerly occupied for that purpose. The Asso-ciation has made one of the finest tracks on the coast with the turns well tracks on the coast with the turns well raised on the outside, and in every way constructed on the latest plans for race courses. They have sunk two wells, one on the back stretch, 12 feet square and 25 feet deep, and one just south of the grand stand, 7 feet square and 22 feet deep. The water will be supplied from these wells to sprinkle the track, and for irrigating purposes. It will be pumped with a portable steam pump, which has a capacity of 3,000 gallons per hour, which would cost in any California valley six cents per hour to run, where oil can be per hour to run, where oil can be bought for $3.20 per barrel. stand. The grounds are admirably situated, and, when the Board of Directors get through with them, Carson can boast of having one of the prettiest Fair grounds on the coast. The grounds are those of old, and if the first race don't resurrect the ghosts of old Hal Clayton, Reilly Armstrong, John Blackburn and John D. Winters, who used to figure prominently on the true in the case of the coast of the case of the coast of th turf in the early sixties, it will be something strange. Here it was that Hank Lufkin bet the Winters boys— Theo, John and Joe—a string of bulls and wagons nearly half a mile long that he had a horse that could run faster and jump higher than anything that wore hair. He lost the bet, however, and Mr. Winters took the Missouri whip and drove the team home.

THE CHALLENGE

For which I'd change the fame of men.

My load unloosed like Pilgrim's thrall: I fed my hungry beart again;
I saw my boyhood home and all—
And heard the blackbirds, nestling, sing
Their tender songs of svenling;

Clear, martial call of buried hosts!

How sure thy challenge passed the years!
I saw like sentries at their posts
A myriad forms; the pines like spears
Shot through the after-sunset's red;

Shot through the after sunset's red;
The darkening fields; the gleam of panes;
The murky dust, star-panophied;
The lazy kine along the lanes;
The school-house dun; the village spire;
The home-bent, dusty harvest folks;
The cornfields fiamed with sunset fire;
And in our tryst beneath the oaks,
We heard the blackbirds, nestling, sin
Their tender songs of evening!

Thus, Angel of our later days,
With ever-hovering, unseen hand
Are flashe: upon our blinded ways
The hidden shrines we understand.
We climb the rugged steeps of Truth,
And faiter. Lo! thy helpings bring
The lesser to the larger Youth!

A note, a tone, the humblest thing, A note, a tone, the humblest thing.
Sweeps irresistless all between,
And there the Now prays with the Then
Where one our heaven was lived unseen,
And where, like pilgrims come again,
We hear the blackbirds, nestting, sing
Their tender songs of evening!

MYTHS AND LEGENDS.

Stories About Serpents in All Lands and Ages.

How They Have Been Held in Veneration d Esteem—Old Norse Tales and Tra-ditions—Extracts from Egyp-tian Hieroglyphics.

One of the most quaint and charming accounts of the beneficent serpents is the story of Northburga, which you may hear told in the Valley of the Neckar, beneath the shadow of the castle which bears her name, says a writer in the North American Re

Northburga, the Christian daughter of a heathen King, persistently refused to accept the husband of her father's choice, alleging as her objection her lover's adherence to the worship of his forefathers. She fled from her enraged father and found shelter in a cavern a few miles down the river. But the King, having discovered her retreat, immediately followed and in vain ought her to return. Rinding eventually that his arguments were useless, in his anger he caught her arm to force her acquiescence. To his consternation the mer

In horror he returned to the eastle, leaving his pious daughter to her own devices. Hardly had he departed when a white snake appeared, and licking Northburga's wound immediately cured the saint, enabling her to go forth and preach the new gospel throughout the valley. Her tomb bears upon it a recumbent figure with only one arm, in memory of the miracle.

The medicinal qualities of dragons' blood were much lauded throughout the middle ages, and universally deemed a protection against any weapon, however deadly. The heroes who were fortunate enough to obtain this precious bath were, like Siegfried, made invulnerable.

In the early Egyptian hierogryphics we find representations of snakes' bodies crowned by female heads; and, indeed, this class of serpents seemed to have been equally attractive to all nations, an evidence of which subtle fascination is that the legends of the "snake maidens" still live in the nursery tales of to-day, perennially young and beautiful as though her birth were not wrapped in the mysteries of a pre-historic age. Of this family came Laura, the witch of Crete, whose woman's heart rendered her doubly sensitive to the degra-dation she suffered during her incarcera-tion within her scaly prison, nor human form, completely lose the essence of her serpent nature. Harmonia, the wife of Cadmus, to be a companion in her husband's misfortunes, and also upon herself the serpent's shape, but being devold of evil intent, never, it is said, shunned but rather another form of the classic Harmonia which has become familiar to us under the name of the fairy Gentill, who, in an adder's of the fairy Gentill, who, in an adder's shape, sought refuge with Prince Leander from the vengeance of the frate gardeners, but at the end of several days dropped her scaly mantel, and, arrayed in supernatural charms, munificently rewarded her protector. In some of the latter accounts of Melusina she is cited as a member of this sisterhood. Jean D'Arras represents her as a severent "enamoled blue and sents her as a serpent "enameled blue and white;" thus also did she present herself to the commander of Lusignan, a fortress which she erected in the early days of her wedded happiness. If there he any who wonder that this union of serpent and woman should have proved attractive to our ancestors might not the sinuous grace and enigmatical character of our own Elsie Venner plead sloquently for the charms of her myth born sisters. This is not, however, this fascinating form that the serpent usually presents itself, but rather in the fearful gaise of the storm cloud Ahi, which Idra sisw, like Red Set, the fratricide; or, again, like the winged dragon, perhaps the most terrible of all the serpent brood. In these evil forms the snake is usually connected, strangely enough, with marsh or water; particularly is this the case in the Hellenic pauticen and in the northern legends. It is not probably that, experiencing the evil effects consequent upon a residence in the vicinity of swampy land, and at the same time sensible of the incalculable benefits accruing from an abundant supply of water, the ancients may, on observing how frequently the marsh surrounded a fountain, have represented the deadly mists arising from the former as a dragon, and personified the latter as a captive maiden or a hidden treasure? The universal attribute of these malign monsters is the capacity they possess to subjugate cities, and even kingdoms, by their pestilential exhalations. Flying by night over the country they breather their poison over the sleeping world, indiscriminately blasting man and beast.

Sometimes, as in the story of Gundel, sents her as a serpent "enameled blue and white;" thus also did she present herself to es, as in the story of Gundel they confine their depredations to a particular castle, but usually, like the "Laidly Worm of Lambeth," they lay waste whole districts of country, devouring the substance of the inhabitants, and eventually, when with the sinking sun of the marsh mists begin to rise, floating bird-like on the night air, yet always preserving a serpentine grace, what was more likely than that the mind of our fore-fathers should have seized upon the death-bringing phenomena, and with the subtle alchemy of poetic thought have transformed the ascending mist into a winged snake, whose poisonous breath should overcome all heroes, be they

The dragon which started up to devour Andromeda was also water-born and subject to the commands of Poseidou, who sent him to revenge an insult to the ocean's queen. But it was especially in the Norse tales that the dragon myth attained to its fullest development. Here, from the first, Sormungander lay in the depths of the ocean, girdling the middle world, dreaming as she waited of the twilight of the gods when should slav and be slain by the when she should slay and be slain by the Siegfried must needs penetrate a black and treacherous fen when searching for the ally of his enemy, the evil smith; he, however, eventually conquered the dragon and came away victorious in spite of the monster's sickening odor and poisonous exhalations. Beowulf slew Gundel, a dragon who made his home in an adjacent marsh and nightly devoured the guests who lag in Hygelad's castle, and King Ortnit's treacherous father-in-law bade him place the dragon's eggs, which he sent as a fair present, in some damp and marshy place that the heat of the sun might hatch them. To sid his country of the ways exils conse rid his country of the many evils consequent upon the ravages of these monsters, he went out to meet them in mortal combat, but, fa'ling asleep in the dragon's de was slain by its foul breath. It resisted all attacks upon its marshy fastness until the coming of Wolfdieterich, by whom it was

In the beautiful story of the lives of Dietwart and Princess Minnie, the unwary maiden, who, in the ardor of the chase, had pursued the wounded stag into the damp and wooded recesses of the forest, was at-tacked by a monstrous serpent, which, after wounding Dietwart, was at length overpowered by the hero, not, however, without having by its poisonous breath so inflamed the wound that, although a mere scratch to all appearances, it required the magic balm possessed by the princess to heal it. As the fairy tales of a country are but the small coin of its mythical treasures, the dragons who, in the story of "The Fair One with the Golden Locks," watched the entrance to the cavern whence flowed the water of life, are perhaps worthy of mention, as well as the monstrous but lethargic serpent who coiled himself around the sing-ing apple in dim resemblance to the ever wakeful guardian of the golden fruit of the

BUSH OTTER'S ROMANCE.

A Yanktonian Sioux in Love with a West Virginia Damsel. For a year or more a full-blood Yanktonian Sioux Indian has been engaged at the Bureau of Ethnology translating the myths and sign language of his race, and has produced some interesting and valuable papers, being able both to read and write the English language fluently. He was educated at Hampton, and has been connected with the geological survey in various mining capacities some years, Last summer, writes a Washington correspondent, he became demoralized. He was sent to West Virginia for a few weeks with a party from the survey, and there made the acquaintance of a palefaced danisel whose attractions seem destroy his mental equifibrium, for he has not been himself since. Instead of attending to his studies diligently, as was his practice before, Bush Otter, for that is his name, spent much time in looking out of the window in an abstracted manner and in writing letters, of which he destroyed as many as he mailed. About once in two weeks he would ask for a tew days' leave of absence and would disappear from the office and his accustomed haunts, but he always refused to tell where he was the property of the second of the secon to tell where he was going or where he had

The applications for leave became so frequent that Major Powell was compelled to refuse them, but Bush Otter seemed all of a sudden to be troubled with poor health. Two or three days each week he would reaway ir on his return of having been ill. It was accidentally discovered that when suffering from these mysterious complaints he invariably went to West Virginia for treatmen and as he appeared to grow worse instead of better, and became absolutely unable to do any work, Major Powell called for his resignation. Bush Otter wrote out the document without hesitation and seemed glad to be relieved from official responsibilities so that he could spend his whole time in loving.
As soon as he drew the pay due him he started for the State of West Virginia and has not been seen since. The officers of the Bureau of Ethnology are greatly interested in the case and await the result of Bush Otter's courtship with anxiety.

GUM-CHEWING GIRLS.

The Amount of Power Wasted Every Day by Each One of Them. The gum-chewing mania having become a question of National importance, like that of the utilization of the water-power of Niagara Falls, one of the Chicago public-school principals has, according to a Chicago jour-nal, recently taken the necessary time from his arduous duties to compute statistics on his arduous duties to compute statistics on the loss of power daily expended—wasted, I may say—in the gum-chewing practice. In arriving at correct mathematical conclu-sions as to the energy required to keep the gum-mills grinding, our learned friend estimates the gum-raising capacity of the fair gum-chewer at the rate of eight ounces per "chaw." This is on the suppo-sition that the mouth is opened half an inch each time in the act of chewing, and that the gam is of the elastic or non-sticky vathe gam is of the elastic or non-sticky va-riety, thereby giving the minimum of power required in the operation. With this basis as a starting-point, the professor easily de ducts a startling series of tables of rates as a starting series of tables of rates weights and measures, which can be epit omized. In the first place, if the jaw be raised one-half an inch with each effort in the act of gum-chewing with the process kept up on an average of ten hours a day—some chewers chew till late at night, and others, even, when asleep—each individual motion of the jaw consuming a second of time, the aggregated opening of a gum-chewer's jaws in one day alone would represent a mouth fifteen hundred feet across, measuring the abyas in its widest diameter. But, since the jaw travels back with every motion, retracing each successive stretch, the space traveled in a day on the ten-hour plan is double the foregoing figures, or three thousand feet—something like three-fifths of a mile. Again, if the force expended per "chaw" represents a like three-fifths of a mile. Again, if the force expended per "chaw" represents a tifting capacity of eight ounces, in the average day, as Mr. Principal figures it, enough muscular energy is exerted—wasted—to enable each individual gum-chewer to have hoisted from a cellar seven and a half feet deep thirty buckets of coal each weighing thirty pounds. In some future article I may—and I may not—pursue the interesting anhchirty pounds. In some future article 1 any — and I may not—pursue the interesting subject, and quote from the professor's work the amazing possibilities in store for home and society when the gum-chewing craze shall have been brought into subjugation and made to serve humanity in channels of How He Became Pamous. The Walker, Iowa, News, eays:

death by Apollo's hand, who thereby gave to the world a pellucid fountain which issued from the monster's body. It will be remembered that Python, like most of his Endred, was a dedice of the marshes. Cadmus, too, found in his wanderings that a clear and beautiful spring was rendered unapproachable by the seven-headed serpent of Mars, and succeeded in slaying him only after the monster had devoured or poisoned all the wanderer's companions. And Hercules, the hero of heroes in whose adventurous hife serpents played so prominent a part, succeeded at last in slaying Hydra, the many headed serpent which, marsh-like, poisoned the air around the fountain of Amymone, and thereby enabled the people to receive benefit of Neptune's munificence. The dragon which started up to devour Andromeda was also water-born and subject to the commands of Poseidou, who sent him to revenge an insult to the ocean's queen. But it was especially in the Norse tales that the dragon myth attained to its fullest development. Here, from the first, some and the dragon myth attained to its fullest development. Let us give the readers of the GA-ZETTE a little timely advice. Hot weather is coming and with it colie, cholers morbus, dysentery diarrhosa The only safe way to combat these diseases, is to keep a reliable remedy at hand, and all who have tried Chamberlain's Colic, Chronic and Diarrhosa Remedy will admit that it is the most prompt, reliable and successful medicine known for these complaints. It costs but 25 or 50 cents and may be the means of saving you or your family much suffering, if not life itself, before the Su ther is over. For sale by Osburn & Shoemaker.

Oregon is one of the most productive States in the Union. Its vast mineral regions contain gold, silver, copper, iron and coal. Its immense tracts of grasing lands support thousands or cattle and sheep, and its extensive agricultural regions produce all the cereals in abundance, the yield per acre being, in some instances, the largest in the world. Among the useful and valuable products of the Webfoot state may be mentioned Oregon Kidney Tea, which has proved a boon to thousands afficted with pain in the back and kidney difficulties. It is purely of vegetable composition and never fails. Sold by William Pluniger.

The immediate symptoms of Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, are a distressing sense of weight, oppression and fullness in the stomach, heartburn, loss of appetite, foul breath, belching, flatulency, nausea, pains in the shoulders and breast. Dr. Henley's Dandelion Tonic promotes healthy digestion and removes all unhealthy symptoms. Sold by William Pinniger:
